Selectmen's Meeting BUDGET STILL IN FLUX

Selectmen together with the Finance Committee went through another thorough review of the town budgets in preparation for town meeting. The total budget is $80,000 in excess of the requirements of Proposition 2 1/2 of estimated $3,225,899, but the revamp of the Old Rochester Regional School budget could eliminate this difference. If not, voters at town meeting will have the option of making the necessary cuts on the floor of the town meeting. The town meeting will be called to order on April 6 in order to adjourn to May 11 when all of the budget matters will be ready for action. Selectmen Chairman R. William Blasdale said that the Board is in agreement that no discussion take place at the April 6 date but that all matters wait until the entire warrant is ready to be acted upon.

TOWN MEETING

The Selectmen, Finance Committee and Town Moderator have agreed that the town meeting would be brought to order on Monday, April 6th, at Bristol Auditorium at Old Rochester Regional High School, but because of various unknown figures that will determine town budgets, it is the intention of the town officials to bring open town meeting for the purpose of adjourning it until May.

Mrs. Philip Murray and her committee worked diligently to prepare for the rummage sale. Area merchants, as well as Club members, donated many items used for the Silent Auction table. With support from everyone, including the buying public, this Rummage Sale was highly successful in raising funds toward scholarship awards for young women. Our thanks to everyone.

Those Bad Nuts and Bolts

Editorial - DCJ

In the horror of the breaking news of yet another attempt to kill a United States President, thousands of words filled the air waves, most repetitious and many inaccurate. In the center of this flood there were a few reflective words beamed from Moscow that were in tune with what every American was feeling. Walter Cronkite, American in a foreign capitol of the most alien philosophy and ideology, asked in quiet despair, "What do you tell these people when they ask you what goes on in the United States? When they don't ask, how do you answer the question in their eyes?"

That burning sick spot in the pit of the stomach loomed larger than life to that stranger in the Communist capitol. We all felt that shame but we were not among strangers.

A week has passed. Now the liberal philosophers could have prompted Walter in his despair. It seems that criminal 22 caliber pistol is to blame. If pistols had been banned, assassination would cease. Poor Walter, the explanation was so simple and yet it escaped him. He could have looked the Russian straight in the eye and explained that we have bad guns in the United States.

Well, is that the answer? We round up all those malevolent machines and melt them down. Then the Mafia goes straight? The assassin teaches Sunday School? The murderer leads a scout troop? The junkie pops chewing gum? The second story man pushes Avon?

There is one thing that might bother someone like the Moscow dweller to whom Walter explains, "We have bad guns in the United States." The Russian might question, "How is it that you have bad guns but no bad people. You have sick people. As soon as this temporary sickness is corrected, back these people go into the society. Are your pistols then so different? Are these machines so criminally inclined that they are beyond repair?"

How would Cronkite look the Russian in the eye and answer?

How would you?

Are all people good and all machines bad? Are all machines good and all people bad? Is it possible that there is a mix. That machines have no capacity for evil or good but that people have that choice and make it. Is it possible that the liberal philosophy could be faulty? That a potential assassin, unconcerned by the prospect of becoming a murderer, would hesitate to carry a gun because it is a criminal offense? Could it be possible that a free choice between good and evil might be influenced by a swift and sure penalty to protect the innocent? Could 50 years of socialistic indoctrination be so wrong? How many Presidents and how many viewing techniques.

The second program focuses on differentiation of acute and chronic Organic Brain Syndromes. Distinguishing points from the interview, history, physical exam and laboratory studies, behavioral and cognitive evaluations are discussed. The multiple conditions that may induce acute OBS are identified.

The third program explores the various forms of depression seen in the elderly, ranging from "existential depression" to unipolar depressions. The primary manifestations of "agitated" and "retarded" depressions are identified. Two patients are presented on film for illustration of depression as legitimate sadness in old age and as reactions to excessive losses.

The last program discusses the variety of behavioral problems encountered among the elderly and explores effective management strategies. Analysis of behavioral problems involves comprehensive patient evaluation, including physical, psychological, social and environmental factors. A number of patients are presented on film to demonstrate the range of problems and treatment techniques that can be effectively employed for community residents as well as institutionalized patients.

This offering has been approved for 4.5 Contact Hours by the Massachusetts Nurses Association which is accredited by the Northeast Regional Accrediting Committee of the American Nurses Association. There is no charge for attending this workshop except for a small fee for registration for C.E.U.'s.

For additional information regarding this workshop on aging, contact the Elderly Unit at the Marion Center for Human Services, 335 Wareham Road, Marion, telephone 748-2850.

Admission to this special exhibition is included in the regular museum charge.

Organized by the International Exhibitions Foundation, Washington, D.C., the exhibition contains works on loan from the Museum of the American China Trade in Milton, Massachusetts. This collection will tour for two years throughout the United States.

The paintings depict in exquisite detail the interiors of Chinese shops in nineteenth-century Canton. All of the works were executed between 1825 and 1830 by an anonymous Chinese artist and were originally intended for export. Such collections of scenes of Chinese life were popular as export items because of their convenient size and low price; as such, they played a vital role in revealing oriental culture to the West in the period before the invention and widespread use of the camera.

Crafts Fair

Cyrus D. Lipsitt of Marion and Arlington, executive director of Worcester Craft Center, 25 Sagamore Road, Worcester, announces the 11th annual Fair of the Crafts. There will be a gala to open the Fair Friday night, May 15, and the weekend. There will be 110 craftspeople in tents on the Center's ground. The building will be used for craft demonstrations, exhibits and special events. The Fair will continue through the weekend and children will enjoy the Fair as well as adults.

The summer program offers children morning classes; and adult classes in most media afternoons and evenings, with some offered for credit through Copace at Clark University. The summer session will run for a five-week period with some classes offered twice weekly.

This outdoor event will be supplemented with indoor activities; a double feature designed to provide demonstrations to educate the public about crafts, and the craft center as a teaching institution. Indoors, there is the children's corner with hand-made articles by high caliber craftsmen; and the gift shop for all occasions. Come and browse!

There is a faculty exhibit going on in which Mr. Lipsitt has a couple of humorous pieces of sculpture one of which is a "boot" inscribed This boot ain't made for walkin. Another sculpture is entitled "Blue Denim".

The director says it's safe to say there's something here for everyone.

Arts Lottery

Although the first disbursement of funds to the local and regional official arts councils had to be postponed from a lack of net revenues, the Arts Lottery is alive and working out the initial problems. Sales for the last month were up by some 20%.

The Arts Lottery was established to provide assistance to community arts throughout the state with funds to be distributed by local and regional arts councils appointed by mayors and boards of selectmen. At this time 327 such communities have been set up; the few remaining communities are considering regionalization.

The $5.00 Arts Lottery ticket is good for four weekly drawings, or $1.25 per week. The chance to become a $200,000 jackpot winner is 1:100,000, the best odds to win a top prize. Now that the sales are low, the
